tion that the former sections in the Consolidation act relating to election inspectors are not repealed by the latest law, and are consequently still in lorce and operative.

According to subdivision 10 of section 1,838 of the Consolidation act, no vote can be registered unless it is determined by three of the Board of Inspectors that he is qualified. Section 1,868 provides that no vote shall be received from any person whose name shall not be found by at least three of the inspectors to be upon at least three of the registers as a qualified voter, and no ballot shall be received or deposited in the box until at least three of the inspectors shall have found the person to be entered as qualified voter, and at least three of the inspectors shall write opposite the voter's name in the appropriate column the word "yes."

The vuestion is, whether or not the new law repeals the above sections of the Consolidation act. Lawyers Hawes and Murray claim.

The vuestion is, whether or not the new law repeals the above sections of the Consolidation act. Lawyers Hawes and Murray claim that it does not, and cite as their authority two decisions of the Court of Appeals in which it is held that a special act cannot be repealed by a general act by implication.

The Consolidation act, they contend, is a special act and the new election law a general act; and as the latter does not specifically repeal the sections of the former referred to they still remain in force, and the ability of the Republican inspector to block the action of the Board still remains in spite of the law which was passed to do away with such practises of intimidation.

The Democratic leaders, however, are not frightened by this apparently shrewd flank movement on the part of the enemy, and senator Jacob A. Cautor, who was the sponsor of the "inspectors of Election bill," exploided the theory of Messra. Hawes and Murray this morning.

"The claim," he said to an Evening Wonld reporter, "that the sections referred to in the Consolidation Bct are not repealed by the law passed at the last session is absurd. They are repealed by implication, because they are in direct conflict with the provisions of the new law, and are utterly inconsistent with it. "Besides, these gentlemen make a big mistake when they say the 'Inspectors of Elections act is a general act. It is as much of a special act as the Consolidation act itself, because it applies only to the city of New York and was intended as a substitute for all previous legislation upon the subject.

"There is not a court in the State that would not hold that the provisions of the Consolidation act were so repealed by implication. This is only another attempt on the part of the Republicans to retain their supremacy in the management of the cecitions in their or the republicans to retain their supremacy in the management of the cecitions in their or work this time, however, and this lates absurd claim which they have made snows what desperate stra

That the courts will uphoid the validity of this new law and accounts there. In a letter published this morning Mr. MacVeagh declares his intention to vote for Cleveland Republican local politicians are very much and stevenson. He says the true welfare of Republican local politicians are very much elated to-day, over the discovery of what they profess to believe is a flaw in the "Inspectors of Election Act," passed at the last session of the Legislature, which discovery, it is contended, will still give the Republican member of the Board of Inspection in each district the balance of power.

By the provisions of the new Election law, the number of Republican inspectors at each polling place in this city was cut down from two to one, while the Democrats retain the same number as before. This gives the latter two out of the three.

James W. Howes and Charles F. Murray, who have been studying into the legal questions involved in this change, announce as their opinion that in spite of the fact that their opinion that in spite of the fact that the latter their opinion that in spite of the fact that the latter their opinion that in spite of the fact that the latter their opinion that in spite of the fact that the latter their opinion that in spite of the fact that the latter their opinion that in spite of the fact that the latter their opinion that in spite of the fact that the latter their opinion that in spite of the fact that the latter their opinion that in spite of the fact that the latter their opinion that in spite of the fact that the latter their opinion that in spite of the fact that the latter their opinion that in spite of the fact that the latter that the latter that the latter that the latter the latter that the latter than the latter than the latter than the latter that the latter than the latter th

In other words, the Republican member has much power as the two Democratic members combined.

They base this conclusion upon the sasump

William Green, of Gloversville, who was elected District-Attorney of Futton County as a Republican two years ago and is now serving his second term in that office, has written a letter to the Secretary of the National Veteran Tariff Reiorm League declaring his intention to vote for Cleveland and stevenson and to support the policy of the Democratic party.

Mr. Green served with great credit during the war and is conspicuous in Grand Army organizations in the State. What he says is of great interest to veterans of the war. Secretary Sheerin, of the Democratic National Committee, said that Mr. McVeagh's letter would be followed in a few days by one from sx-Judge Cooley, of Michigan, declaring in favor of Cleveland and Democracy. Ex-Judge Cooley has been a lifelong Republican, too. He was appointed United States Circuit Judge as a Republican, and subsequently was President of the Inter-State Commerce Commission, an office which he resigned.

> Exciting Contest Between Side-Wheeler and Screw-Propeller.

> A rare sight was witnessed on Long Island ound this morning. It was a close and lively race between two of the big steamboats that come to this city.

It was a test between different systems of marine machinery to demonstrate the relative qualities of the compound beam engine that goes with the sidewheeler, and the modern triple expansion The Puritan is a side-wheeler, one of the Richard Peck is the first screw steamer to go the Delaware and has only been in service

The agents of the Fall River line sent a challenge to the peeple of the New Haven line, which was accepted. The race was to be between a point near Stratford Shoals to be between a point near Stratford Shoals to Fort Schuyler, a distance of fitty-six miles. The reck left New Haven at 10.39 o'clock last night. When she got out into the Sound she slowed up and waited for the Puritan to come along. In a short time the lights of two steamers came into view. One was the Puritan and the other the Maine, of the Stenlington line, another of the recent additions to the fleet of big side-wheelers. Everything was in shape on both the Peck and the Puritan or the contest. Officers and crew were worked up to a pitch of enthusiasm and excitedly waited the beginning of the contest.

The Puritan came up on the port side of the Peck and both then started off, the stem of each on a line. Capt. Simmons stood in the pilot-house of the Puritan. Capt. Peck walked the forward deck of the Peck, and Engineer sam Sauit grasped the lever.

The two boats ran along side by side for some time. Coal was passed along quickly, and the engines throbbed and vibrated, and volumes of smoke boured out of the funnels.

The passengers on both vessels knew that the race was coming off and many of them remained on deck to see it.

The weather was stormy and rain fell most of the time, but the people became enthusiastic and bets were made on the result.

The two boats continued nose and nose for about fifteen minutes.
